TUCKER'S LAST HOPE: APPEAL TO GUILD!

POPE SIGNS PAPERS FOR O'CONNELL'S APPOINTMENT

MAINE BISHOP COADJUTOR IN ARCHDIOCESE

...mer Boston Priest Leaves Portland for Higher Post.

WELL-KNOWN AND LIKED

Catholic circles in Boston and throughout New England are to-day overjoyed at the confirmations of the exclusive cable to the BOSTON AMERICAN yesterday that the Right Rev. William H. O'Connell of Portland, Me., has been appointed by the Holy See at Rome as bishop-coadjutor to the Boston diocese.

A dispatch from Rome says the Pope today signed the papers appointing Bishop O'Connell coadjutor-archbishop.

Although Cardinal Gotti, prefect of the congregation of the propaganda, is dangerously ill with pneumonia, the congregation met unexpectedly yesterday and discussed the appointment of Bishop O'Connell, with the result that the cardinals stood almost unanimously for him. The friends of the bishop are jubilant. They scarcely expected so quick and complete a victory.

Popular in Boston.

Probably no man is more popular throughout New England and in Boston than Bishop O'Connell, and his appointment, with the full rights of succession to Archbishop Williams, is welcomed by the clergy and the parishioners, young and old.

Prominent men in Boston are pleased to count Bishop O'Connell one of their best friends. Mayor Fitzgerald and the bishop are particularly intimate, and City Messenger Edward J. Leary is another close friend.

Members of the Redberry Club in particular look to him as the mainstay of all their social gatherings. He is a member of that organization, and at the annual gatherings of the club at Old Orchard Beach, he has always been the mainstay of the party and the success of these annual gatherings has depended upon him. This trait of sociability has made him one of the best liked of clergymen, and his interest in the welfare of young and old has also done much to bring him close to the hearts of his people.

Friends at Vatican.

Among the members of the Vatican at Rome he counts some strong friends. Particularly close to him in all his interests he found Cardinal Satolli, and another man is Cardinal Martinelli, both of these men have followed the progress of Bishop O'Connell with never-ceasing interest.

Bostonians remember Bishop O'Connell particularly as an assistant at St. Joseph's, where he labored for ten years.

Bishop O'Connell is at Rome at the present time, having just returned from Japan, where he went as special envoy from the Pope to the Emperor of that country bearing a papal encyclical. In this work he was especially successful and received the special commendation of the Pontiff for the results he obtained.

Lowell claims him as that city December 8, 1859. From childhood his parents decreed that he should become a priest, completed that high school of that city, he was sent to St. Charles College, Baltimore. In three years he came back to Boston and was graduated in the class of 1881 from Boston College.

Excellent records in both colleges paved Archbishop Williams to obtain for him a scholarship in the American College at Rome, an honor which is greatly coveted by all aspirants for priesthood.

Ordained in Rome.

He was ordained in Rome on January 8, 1884, and remained in that city as a professor in the college until 1885. At that time he longed to see America, and upon his return to Boston was appointed to the new parish at Medford as assistant rector. Two years later he was transferred to St. Joseph's Church, Boston, under the Very Rev. Dr. Byrne, and ten years after this he was selected to fill a vacant rectorship in the American College at Rome. Five years' service in this place was followed by the appointment to the bishopric of Portland. His consecration in that diocese won for him the highest praise, not only from his own people, but from the clergy of all denominations.

CO-ADJUTOR ARCHBISHOP OF BOSTON.

PRESENTS LAW FOR SAFES IN PULLMANS

ALBANY, Jan. 26.—"I want to please the drummer, the unhappy man of the road who lives a life of thwarted ambition and whose home is on the bounding sleeping car. He deserves well at the hands of all humanitarians.

So said Assemblyman Story when he pronounced that he would present a bill providing for a fireproof safe in every parlor car and sleeper on every train carrying passengers in the State. In these safes the drummers can deposit their diamonds and other precious belongings.

COUNCIL AGAIN DELAYS LIGHTING ORDER VOTE

MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP ADVOCATES ARE EMPHATIC IN CITY HALL DEBATE.

Action on the order now before the Common Council calling for the establishment and maintenance of a municipal gas and electric lighting plant was last night postponed by that body for one week. The order must be considered by the Council next Thursday night.

Both those members who favor and those who oppose the order agreed, practically, to the postponement, the friends of the order because it was not certain if the order were acted upon last night that it would have passed, and the enemies of the order because they are anxious at any and all times to postpone action or side track the measure.

Two-thirds of the entire membership of the Common Council, that is fifty members, are needed to pass the order. There were present last night forty-nine men who have pledged themselves to the voters to vote for the order. Daniel J. Curley, Jr., of Ward 18, Roxbury, was the absent councilman who has pledged himself over his own signature in a letter to the Municipal Ownership League to vote for the order.

Twenty-five members of the council have not been heard from publicly as to how they stand on the order, and the friends of the measure, though they believe the order has a number of supporters in this group of twenty-five, are waiting to find out how they stand before they allow the order to go to a vote.

Two Hours Debate.

Though a vote on the order was postponed last night, this did not prevent a two-hours' debate on the merits of the measure itself, on a question whether or not to suspend the rules in order that an immediate vote might be taken on an order introduced by Councilman M. H. Fitzgerald of Ward 2, East Boston, which called for the creation of a joint committee of the Council and the Board of Aldermen empowered to look into the question of the valuation of the various Boston gas companies and the electric lighting monopoly.

Mr. Fitzgerald's order was as follows:

"That in accordance with the Revised Laws, Chapter 34, Section 15, His Honor the Mayor be requested to select a committee of the City Council to examine with him the property named in the schedules filed with the City Clerk by the Edison Electric Illuminating Company, the Boston Consolidated Gas Company, the Charlestown Gas & Electric Company and the East Boston Gas Company, or used in connection therewith, to determine the value thereof, and that His Honor the Mayor be further requested to employ a real estate expert to assist in such examination; the expense attending the same to be charged to the appropriation for City Council, Incidental Expenses."

In explanation of his order Councilman Fitzgerald said:

Would Learn Value of Plants.

"Now, as one who is interested in municipal ownership, and as one who is interested in seeing it put through as a success, I want to see this proposition, when it is submitted to the people, indorsed by them; and it seems to me the chances of their indorsing the if it can be shown, as materially increased if would be by these experts I had hoped it would be by these experts that these plants are not worth anything like the prices which they set upon them—that instead of $67,000,000, perhaps, they would find that their value was nearer $40,000,000.

"And if the value of those plants should be found to be over $31,000,000, it seems to me that the time is ripe when the Legis-

VALENCIA'S DEATH ROLL NUMBERS 118

RESCUE SHIP TOPEKA SAVES 23 EXHAUSTED SURVIVORS, TAKEN FROM RAFT.

VICTORIA, B. C., Jan. 26.—As far as can be told to-day 118 persons lost their lives in the wreck of the steamer Valencia and thirty-seven were saved, but not a woman or child escaped. News of the finding of three more survivors on Turtle Island reached here to-day. These men drifted ashore on a second raft launched Wednesday afternoon, of ten men who left the steamer, but three were rescued.

The steamer Topeka, bringing twenty-three survivors of the wrecked steamer, arrived at Port Townsend early to-day.

The story of the last hours on the doomed steamer will go down as a supreme tragedy of the sea. Captain Johnson elected to die rather than go ashore with the awful memories of his mistake to blast his life.

Captain Loaded Revolver.

One of the survivors says that the Valencia's first officer carefully loaded his revolver with the avowed intention of killing himself when rescue was beyond any possibility.

Most shocking of all is the death suffered by most of the women passengers. One of these, conscious of the approaching end, started the hymn, "Nearer, My God, to Thee." Others took up the strain and sang, and soon the whole company joined in harmony. These women, lashed or clinging desperately to the rigging, furnish the most pathetic figures in the dark record.

Sixty Left on Wreck.

The majority of the women had refused to go in the lifeboats, believing escape by water hopeless, and elected instead to trust to the rigging. It is believed not one of them remains alive.

When the men rescued left the wreck there were known to be aboard the Valencia sixty-eight persons, as follows: Captain Johnson, First Officer Holmes, Fourth Officer Aberg, Chief Engineer W. E. Browning, Assistant Freight Clerk E. E. Hopkins, Chief Steward J. Hoddinott, Second Steward N. B. Campbell, Barkeeper Wilkins, Stewardess Musgrove, Porter Hughes, eight women, three children and about forty men.

SNOWSTORM COMING; RAIN AT ITS HEELS

"The Beautiful" for New England To-night, But Temperature Is Rising.

Sweeping up from the South and headed for Boston and New England is a snowstorm of uncertain caliber. The weather men announce that it will be snow to-night and probably rain to-morrow.

The forecast is: Snow to-night; Saturday, rain or snow, with rising temperature; fresh northeasterly winds, decreasing.

The storm is now in the vicinity of the Carolinas. In Georgia there has been a snowfall, at about the extreme southern end of the storm.

Storm Signals are displayed from Cape Cod along the sound to New Haven, and a rising temperature along the sound has marked its coming.

In Boston the coldest during the night was 20 above, and at noon the mercury had climbed to 30. At Nantucket it was 20 above at 8 a. m. Northfield, Vt., is still cold, at 8 o'clock the mercury registering 8 above.

RETURNS SHOW FURTHER GAIN FOR LIBERALS

New Seats Captured in All Sections by Followers of Campbell-Bannerman.

LONDON, Jan. 26.—The election returns announced this afternoon show a continuance of Liberal gains. New seats have been won by the followers of Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman in the West Division of Cambridgeshire, the West Division of Cornwall, the North Division of Hertfordshire, the Northwest Division of Staffordshire, the Richmond Division of Yorkshire, Peterborough and East Grinstead Division of Sussex.

The standing of the parties up to the present time is:

Liberals, 248; Conservatives, 147; Nationalists, 82; Laborites, 26.

Elections are being held to-day in eleven divisions.

$35,000 TUG FOR BOSTON.

PORTLAND, Me., Jan. 26.—The tug Orion, the largest ocean boat ever built in this city, costing $35,000, was launched by the Portland Shipbuilding Company, for the Boston Tow Boat Company.

Prepared to Accept Death Sentence and If U. S. Supreme Court Refuses to Intervene Will Ask Governor to Spare His Life—Protests His Innocence.

With all hope of a new trial from the Massachusetts courts gone, Charles Louis Tucker, through his counsel, is preparing to take his case to the Supreme Court of the United States, and, in the event that fails, to appeal to Governor Guild for executive clemency.

Reiterating his innocence, and insisting that he is the victim of a great wrong, Tucker yet hopes that his life may be saved before the day on which he is to be doomed to die in the electric chair.

"I am prepared to hear my sentence pronounced in court to-morrow," he says, "and I shall listen to it bravely. I am determined not to weaken when I hear the terrible words."

"I waive all my rights of exceptions to the Supreme Court of this State," he says. "I cannot see that there is any more chance for me there. But there will be an appeal made for me to the Supreme Court of the United States, and I have all hope that that court will give me a new trial.

"If this should fail, then an appeal will be made to the Governor of Massachusetts, but I firmly believe that the Supreme Court of the country will grant my appeal and that this last resort will not be necessary."

He said these things to his senior counsel, James H. Vahey, as they parted after a long conference. Mr. Vahey, in talking with a representative of the BOSTON AMERICAN after his visit, said:

APPEAL TO GUILD AS LAST HOPE.

"Everything has gone against Tucker, and we both agreed this afternoon that it would be best not to take the exceptions on the new evidence before the Supreme Court of this State. We talked together for almost an hour, and while he declares his innocence and feels that he is being wronged, he knows that there is no chance for him before the Massachusetts courts.

"Tucker therefore decided to waive his rights of appeal, and said to me that he was ready to take his death sentence. There is still open an appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States, and later an appeal to the Governor of Massachusetts, and these courses will be taken in an effort to save his life."

Tucker will be taken to the court room in which he was tried and convicted to-morrow morning, and sentence will be imposed. He will be made to stand in the identical pen in which he sat during his trial and listen to the fatal words from Judge Sloman's lips. Afterward he will be returned to his cell in the East Cambridge jail until ten days before the first day of the week appointed for the sentence, according to section 38, chapter 309 of the Revised Laws, which is as follows:

> After a convict has been sentenced to the punishment of death he shall be confined in the jail in the county in which he was convicted until within ten days of the first day of the week appointed for the execution of the sentence of death. He shall, within such ten days at a time chosen by the sheriff, be conveyed by him or a deputy designed by him, as secretly as may be, to the State Prison, and shall, with the warrant, be delivered to the warden thereof or to the officer performing the duties thereof.
>
> If he shall, unless lawfully discharged from such imprisonment, be kept in a cell provided for the purpose from the time of such delivery until the sentence of death is executed upon him, and no person shall be allowed access to him without an order of the court except the officers and employees of the prison, his counsel and such physicians, priest or minister of religion as the warden may approve, and the members of his family who are identified to the satisfaction of the warden of the prison.
>
> If the execution of the sentence of death is required by the Governor, or is otherwise delayed by process of law, the convict may in the discretion of the warden, be confined in one of the cells in the military prison established by chapter one hundred and nine of the resolves of the year eighteen hundred and ninety-four.

WOMAN'S DENIAL DEEPENS MYSTERY IN TUCKER CASE

NEW YORK, Jan. 26.—Mrs. Olive Russell McIsaac, the Brooklyn woman who created a sensation by declaring that her husband, John A. 'I AM NOT GUILTY'--TUCKER; 'I BELIEVE HIM, SAYS MOTHER

Does Not Realize Full Import of Death Sentence—She Thoroughly Believes New Trial Will Be Granted—Looks Upon Doom Judge Will Pronounce as Matter of Form.

By Eleanor Ames.

For two hours last night I sat with Mr. and Mrs. Albert Tucker, parents of Charles Louis Tucker, in the cheery parlor of their pleasant home at Auburndale.

It was only one of many such visits—visits in which the tragic lights and shades of this most remarkable case have been revealed from every viewpoint, but I came away more than ever convinced of the fact that from the depths of their honest hearts the father and mother have the strongest belief in the innocence of the young man who to-morrow morning will hear the sentence of death pronounced upon him by a court within whose power it lies to limit to a minute his life on this earth.

Never for any moment has the faith of Mr. or Mrs. Tucker wavered.

"I know he is innocent of this great crime," declared the father, "and I am simply overwhelmed by the fact that the court has denied him another trial. There is a great something which I cannot understand."

Would Have Told Her if Guilty, Says Mother.

"If he was guilty he would have told me," said his mother, "but he has repeatedly said he is innocent.

"I know he is. And it almost drives me crazy to think that I cannot convince the court and everybody else of it."

Mrs. Tucker visited her son yesterday. It was the last time she will see him until he has been arraigned for death in the electric chair.

By his own request she will not be in court when that dreadful sentence is pronounced.

"I feel that I ought to be there, in spite of Louis asking me not to," she said. "If he can stand it, I am sure I should be able to."

"I think that my being there would help him. It se—ut to me that I could take the same pain that he will suffer and in that way he would feel less.

"It makes me feel that I am deserting him at the time when he needs me most."

Tears were rolling down the father's cheeks.

"We can neither of us do much for him," he said. "There are times when a person has to bear things alone. But we shall both see him again."

Does Not Realize Full Import of Sentence.

The full import of the death sentence does not seem to have reached Mrs. Tucker.

So thoroughly does she believe that a new trial will be granted by the United States Supreme Court, that she has come to look upon the sentence almost as a matter of form, an ugly something which the law requires to be done.

Before Charles L. Tucker leave his room pronounced he will address the court.

The chances are that "—will take up his trial in detail, and go over many things which, somewhat prejudiced the jury.

There is no doubt but that he realizes in fullest degree the stupendous seriousness of the situation.

His mother tells me that the past week has changed him more than she can describe.

Never before has she seen him so depressed and so disheartened.

Yet he tries to be cheerful.

"This isn't the last of this," he said to her, "and I haven't given up hope. We shall have something to show for our efforts before long."

The last time his mother saw him was on Wednesday afternoon.

He will accompany Sheriff Brackett direct hall, where he is now in the death house, to the state prison at Charlestown.

Will Keep Up Visits While He Lives.

"You will come to see me just as often as you can, won't you, Mamma?" he asked her. "And tell Papa to come as often as he can. I need you both."

"I told him I should never cease my visits so long as he was there," said Mrs. Tucker, "and that nothing but his own words would ever make me doubt him.

"I am not guilty," he said. He has repeated it over and over again, and I believe he tells the truth."

He did," agreed the father.

Mr. and Mrs. Tucker have no sensible sentimentality regarding Charles. It has been their belief that he acknowledge many of his faults, but still believe absolutely that in this murder he is guiltless.

Not long ago someone spoke to Mrs. Tucker regarding her ever failing devotion.

"A mother could do nothing else," she replied simply.

"Any mother who is worth the name would do just what I have done."

Still, admitting all that, the strain of going every Wednesday and Sunday through the dreadful Charlestown jail, with its cells and prisoners with good cheer and smiles and words of encouragement, has been a severe test even a mother's endurance and devotion.

Strain Has Been Terrible.

"It is not the visits that wear me," she said with a sad, patient little smile. "It's this awful waiting and hoping and not knowing what we can do that is hard. And it's the loneliness of the home, where Mr. Tucker and I have spent so many years waiting for Louis to return."

"There must be something which will clear up the mystery," said the father.

"I can never believe but that an awful mistake has been made."

This attitude of the parents is not a pose. It is genuine.

But Charles L. Tucker is facing death unsupported by parental faith—that can only comfort him.

In order to wipe away the import of to-morrow's death laden words some great legal move must be made.

What it is, no one, not even the attorneys, seems to know.

THREATEN OIL LEADERS WITH STATE PRISON

Hadley Finds Evidence of Forgery and Will Urge Jerome to Take Action.

MAY CALL ROCKEFELLER

CLEVELAND, Jan. 26.—Attorney-General Hadley of Missouri is to-day preparing papers to forward to District Attorney Jerome of New York, asking the latter to investigate part of the testimony given at the hearing here in the suit of the State of Missouri against the Standard Oil Company and alleged independent oil companies relating to the action of A. Theodore Doremus, a notary of Richmond County, N. Y., who is employed by the Standard in the offices at No. 26 Broadway.

According to the testimony, Doremus is alleged to have attested to a forged signature on the certificate of incorporation of the Republic Oil Company. Under the laws of New York State this action is forgery in the first degree. Hadley will forward a copy of the testimony to Jerome, and ask him to begin a grand jury investigation of the notary's alleged action. If the notary attested to the forged signature at the request of any official of the Standard, the investigation may result in indicting that official on the charge of aiding in the commission of a forgery.

Mr. Hadley, it is announced, has found a point which may require the testimony of Frank Rockefeller. He may decide to place the brother of John D. Rockefeller on the stand. Rockefeller says he is willing to testify. Hadley and Rockefeller have had a conference and both said if Rockefeller's testimony could be of any service it would be taken, otherwise Rockefeller would not be called. Before the hearing was resumed this morning before Commissioner Schwentner, Hadley said:

"I regard Turrell's testimony as conclusive evidence that the Republic Oil Company is a part of the Standard Oil Company. It is what I started out to prove."

Best Exposure Yet Obtained.

"Sufficient evidence has been procured to bring criminal proceedings against officials of the Standard Oil Company in New York," said Attorney-General Hadley, "Louis H. Turrell, an accountant of Detroit and for fourteen years an employe of the Standard Oil Company, who was on the stand all day, has given us the best exposure of Standard Oil methods that we have yet obtained. I shall send a copy of his testimony to District-Attorney Jerome of New York, with the request that it be thoroughly examined, and that criminal proceedings be brought against the parties guilty of causing a false signature to be attached to articles of incorporation.

"Forgery in the First Degree."

"Mr. Turrell has sworn that he was induced by Standard Oil officials to sign the name 'F. A. Turrell' to documents when really his name was Louis H. Turrell. His testimony further shows that his signature was never sworn to, and the notary who took his affidavit can under the laws of New York, be prosecuted for forgery in the first degree.

"It will be up to Mr. Jerome whether the persons who induced Turrell to sign his name falsely can be included in the prosecution."

The story told on the stand indicated that the Republic Company was absolutely the creature of the Standard Oil magnates, that it derived its being from the heads of the trust at No. 26 Broadway, New York, and that all of its business was directed by the heads of the Standard Oil leaders.

Never in the history of the trust have the methods by which John D. Rockefeller and his coterie of friends built up their gigantic monopoly been so ruthlessly exposed. A thousand and one small methods of fraud and deception were shown in the testimony, lying letters sent to agents throughout the territory in which the Republic Company dealt were produced in evidence, and the secret instructions of Standard Oil officials to the officers of the Republic Company, which did business ostensibly as an independent company, were laid bare.

WOMEN TRY TO SAVE TEACHER

Indignant at the move of the board of supervisors to dismiss from the school department Mrs. Anna Merrill, who for twenty-seven consecutive years has been a teacher in the Boston public schools, about fifty women thronged the rooms of the school committee and demanded that their protest be heard.

Mrs. Merrill is sub-master of the Henry Vane school in Jamaica Plain, where she has been for seven years. Previous to that she taught twenty years in a school in Germantown. The charge against her is "incompetency."

A pathetic feature of the charges against Mrs. Merrill is that if she can serve but three years more she will be entitled to a pension. She has paid a large sum into the Teachers' Relief Association, and should she lose her place now will have lost all that she has paid in.

ICE WEAKENS B. & M. BRIDGE

HAVERHILL, Jan. 26.—The temporary pile bridge over which the trains of the Western division of the Boston & Maine have been run while the regular bridge is being rebuilt, has been discovered to be somewhat weakened, apparently by the pressure of the ice coming down the Merrimack river. The bridge shakes perceptibly, and freight trains which usually traverse it after midnight are being sent around by way of Newburyport, over the Eastern division. Passengers on the theatre train from Boston were carried to the Haverhill Bridge station and compelled to walk across the lower bridge.

NEWSPAPER WOMEN GREET "JOHN OLIVER HOBBES"

Snapshot of Famous Authoress Taken To-day by Boston American Photographer.

JOHN OLIVER HOBBES (MRS. CRAIGIE).

John Oliver Hobbes (Mrs. Pearl Terese Craigie) is in Boston to-day. A reception in her honor was given this afternoon by the New England Woman's Press Association at the Vendome. The reception was one of the principal social-literary events of this season, being attended by prominent men and women of letters and by members of Boston's most exclusive society.

Mrs. Craigie, although now of London, where she achieved her great literary distinction, was born in Boston. She holds a high place in the literary and social life of the world's metropolis. Her latest book, "The Flute of Pan," is brining her even more honors.

Some of the guests especially invited to attend the reception this afternoon were:

Governor and Mrs. Curtis Guild, Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. Eben S. Draper, Mrs. Roger Wolcott, President and Mrs. Eliot, Mrs. Donald McLean, Colonel T. W. Higginson, Dean Irwin of Radcliffe, Mrs. Charles S. Sargent, Mrs. Edgar Van Etten, Mr. and Mrs. William Dean Howells, Miss Woolley of Mt. Holyoke Seminary, Grafton D. Cushing, Charles Gibson, Miss Arnold of Simmons College, Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Mail Orders Filled

We take pleasure in filling mail orders. Sometimes goods are exhausted by customers who come to the store, so it is well for those writing to mention second choice.

To Quickly Readjust Our Clothing Stock We Offer $10.50 Overcoats and Suits at $7.50

We have gone further than that. We have reduced the prices of all medium and high grade clothing because immediate stock readjustment is necessary. Too many overcoats and too many heavy weight suits. You know the reason—a mild winter.

With the exception of a few days, summer clothes could have been worn till now. The cold days are here, and those who have refrained from buying may do so at a great saving.

Former prices have been abandoned all along the line, as today's quotations show. But our store policy makes it imperative that this big clothing stock shall be disposed of at once, and unusually low prices create the force that will make it move. Here's the way the prices have dropped:

$7.50 for Men's $10.50 Overcoats or Suits
$9.00 for Men's $15.00 Overcoats or Suits
$12.00 for Men's $18.00 Overcoats or Suits

250-POUND WIFE MADE HIM WASH DISHES; USED BED AS DOG KENNEL

NOW WHAT WOULD YOU DO IN THIS CASE?

Being some Impressions of Cartoonist Dennis.

Judge Aiken Gives Decree Without Waiting to Hear All Witnesses.

BENJAMIN P. WALKER, proprietor of a Howard street pool and billiard room, who sued his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth H. Walker, for divorce, on the grounds of extreme cruelty and abusive treatment, was granted a decree nisi by Chief Justice John A. Aiken in the Superior Court.

Mr. Walker, a meek-appearing man, testified that he was not satisfied with his matrimonial venture because his wife, who weighs more than 250 pounds, while he only weighs half that amount, abused him, made him do her work about the house and allowed her three dogs, one of which was mangy, to use his room as a kennel and his bed as their bed during the daytime.

Despite the dignity of the court, the case took on the character of a farce comedy in two acts, one occurring inside the courtroom during the trial and the other in the corridors after it was over.

Act First.

SCENE: Divorce Court interior in the sombre twilight of a Winter's day. Enter principal, attorneys and witnesses.

Attorney G. M. Poland (counsel for Mr. Walker): "Mr. Walker, take the stand."

Mr. Walker does as directed and is duly sworn.

Attorney: "Mr. Walker, your name is Benjamin P. Walker; you are proprietor of a pool and billiard parlor on Howard street, and you re... Boston ...7 Glenway street, Dorchester?" ...es, run...

"While I was ... No. 6 ...ills street my wife chased me, th...w a p...n at me and then went upstairs to her room. When I followed to go to my own room she flew at me, hit me, punched me, scratched me and kicked me unmercifully. She wore a pair of sharp-pointed shoes, which cut my shins ...dly when she kicked. I finally became ...raid to live with her, as I never knew ...at she would do."

Had Fads and Fancies.

"Did your wife ever have any fads or ...cies?"

"Yes, sir. She was a fanatic on astrol... and on palmistry. I would try to ...lain things, and she would tell me that ... stars said differently, and she would ...n become aggressive because I dared ...gest that the stars might be mistaken. ... had three dogs, and——"

Laughter in the court room, which was ...ckly quelled by the court officer.

"What in particular did you object to ...out the dogs?"

"The fact that one of them, 'Teddy,' ...d the mange, and that he was the par...cular one to be placed in my bed during ...e daytime while I was away. Also that ... was obliged to sleep in that bed and ...oom at night where the dogs had been ...laced all day, and while the room was ...n a filthy condition." (Nervously and ...alf-fearfully as his wife peered in at the ...oor from the entryway, where she was ...waiting a summons into the room.)

"What can you say about your wife's ...usekeeping ability?"

"I did not know she had any. At least ...e never exercised it. She kept the house ... dirty as any American woman could ...ep it. I have done everything in that ...use in the line of housework. I have ...ashed the dishes morning, noon and ...ght, swept and scrubbed the floor, got...n the meals, and even did the family ...ashing several times.

Gave Him Lectures.

"And what would your wife do during ...is time?"

"She would sit and laugh and fold her ...ands and give me a learned dissertation ...n astrology and palmistry, and then com...plain because I could not stay at home all ...ay and do my housework."

To opposing counsel, R. R. Gilman, wit...ess admitted that he was very much ...fraid of his wife.

Enter John H. Bailey, Jr., who lived ... the same house with the Walkers dur...ing the Summer of 1904 while the win...dows were open, and frequently heard ...rs. Walker chase Mr. Walker about the ...oms of the house.

He testified that he heard the sound ... scuffling and blows and Mrs. Walker's ...ice, very loud, denouncing her husband ...th all kinds of epithets and names to ... found in or out of the dictionary.

He said: "One morning I saw Mrs. ...alker chase Mr. Walker from the veranda ...o the house. Then I heard Mrs. ...alker's voice in loud angry tones; a ...mble and crash of furniture, a short ...uffling, and then all was still except for ... sound of heavy footsteps restlessly ...mping from one room to another."

"Do you know whose footsteps those ...e?"

"Well, rather. One can easily tell the ...erence between the tread of a person ...hing 250 pounds and those of another ...ghing half that."

...ld you ever see or hear the dogs, ... Bailey."

"The dogs were always around. They ...e a nuisance. One of them had the ...ange. But what could we do? Mrs. ...alker had a bad temper and we had to ... up with it."

A third actor in the comedy put in an ...pearance in the limelight when Mr.

Bailey had delivered his lines, and gave his name as John Washburn, stating that he was a machinist, now living in Chelsea, and that he had formerly lived in Dorchester under the flat occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Walker.

His occupation necessitates him being in the midst of much noise during the daytime, but the atmospheric conditions at the Dorchester household during the frequent set-tos proved to be such that the noises were carried too clearly and frequently to even his hardened ears, with the result that he removed his family.

He testified that he frequently heard loud noises and quarrelling, Mrs. Walker apparently being the leader in the discussions. He said: "I heard noises, crashes and sounds as of furniture being pushed about, accompanied by heavy treading as though one party was chasing another. By the voices I judged that Mrs. Walker was the strenuous party.

"Mrs. Walker told me that her husband was a bad, bad man, and not fit for a decent woman to live with. On acquaintance I found him the very reverse from troublesome. He was very weak and mild.

"I have frequently seen Mr. Walker cleaning out the apartments.

"Mrs. Walker has time and again threatened to have her husband put out of her way by sending him to an insane asylum, and even went so far as to ask my wife to go with her to Dr. Jelly while she put the case to him."

Used Room for Kennel.

Not to be outdone by her husband, Mrs. Helen Washburn next faced the audience as prima donna with corroborative evidence and with other evidence even more startling than that set forth by other witnesses, given in a clear, melodious voice. She said:

"I frequently saw Mrs. Walker shut the dogs in Mr. Walker's room while he was away in the daytime. Almost every day the dogs would be allowed to use the room as a kennel.

"'Teddy,' one of the dogs, was frequently shut in Mr. Walker's room, and he had the mange, too."

"The dog, I suppose you mean," interjected the Court, to the great amusement of the other members of the company.

"Yes, sir. And she kept him there, the dog, I mean, until he behaved himself or until Mr. Walker came home at night. That dog was petted like a baby, and, mangy as he was, was put to bed in Mr. Walker's bed.

"Mrs. Walker did not even pretend to keep house. She said to me on more than one occasion: 'Anyone can do housework. I won't, as I have too much brains for such menial labor.'"

"I was at the Walkers' house almost every day during the latter months of 1901 and the early part of 1902, and I never saw the two people together but what they quarrelled," said Mrs. Julia Hewes, who was a next-door neighbor of the couple for some time.

"Mr. Walker has been nagged and treated so by her that he actually feared her. But I can say this for him. He has always acted the part of a gentleman.

"He never raised his hand against her, being too much of a gentleman to strike a woman."

At this statement amusement showed itself on the face of every person present in the room, as he or she drew a mental picture of the slight Mr. Walker attempting to chastise sturdy Mrs. Walker, who, judging by weight, would make two of the gentleman in question.

At last the case was decided, before the defense had put on any witnesses, and before the libellant had exhausted half of his.

The courtroom was shortly afterward deserted, and the principals and attorneys and witnesses filed out into the corridor.

Act Second.

Scene: Corridor, near elevator well, elevator having ascended with Mrs. Walker, her counsel and witnesses. Elevator descends, showing Mr. Walker, counsel and witnesses standing near the door waiting to be taken aboard.

"Good, we've got the divorce. Now let's get out of here. Let's take the elevator down."

A discussion then followed as to whether the party should walk or ride. The question was soon settled, as one of the witnesses on the victorious side saw the countenance of Mrs. Walker glaring at the group from the interior of the elevator car.

"Don't get in. She's there," said a voice, and the group quickly scrambled away from the doorway.

"I guess we'll walk," said Mr. Walker.

HARVARD MAN PLANS CHURCH OF MOHAMMED

Emam Ally of Algiers Hopes to Raise $8,000 for Building in South Boston.

Emam Higay Ally of Algiers, who is a student at Harvard College, is the prime mover in an attempt to found a Mohammedan church in Boston, the first in the United States. Mr. Ally believes that such a church should be secured in Boston, where the 500 Mohammedans who reside in Boston can have the opportunity to receive an education, and not only be taught the faith of Mohammed, but learn the English language. Mr. Ally is endeavoring to secure $8,000 for the purchase of a building in South Boston.

"After being in this country since last September I have come to the conclusion that such a church should be erected," said Mr. Ally to a reporter for the BOSTON AMERICAN. "I am endeavoring to raise $8,000, which I think is sufficient to start the church. It is my intention to teach the people of my faith in Boston. They should have a place where they can be taught the ways of the American people. In founding such a place the Boston Mohammedans would be taught to be better citizens. If I am successful in raising this amount for the church and school it will be the first of its kind in America."

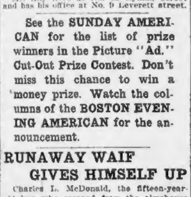

Mr. Ally lives at No. 12 Lyman street and has his office at No. 9 Leverett street.

RUNAWAY WAIF GIVES HIMSELF UP

Charles L. McDonald, the fifteen-year-old boy who escaped from the almshouse at Tewksbury, has given himself up to the police. Hungry and thinly clad he walked into the East Boston station, and with tears in his eyes said, "Captain, I'm hungry; I have no money, no place to sleep, no father or mother, and nobody wants me." He told Captain Evans that he escaped a few weeks ago, and has been picking up odd jobs for a living in Boston.

MILLIONS FOR EDISON FROM GOULD SUIT

Inventor Wins Great Victory After 30 Years' Litigation Over Western Union.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Jan. 26.—Thomas A. Edison did not know until informed by an AMERICAN reporter that Judge Hazel, in Buffalo, had handed down a decison against the Goulds and in favor of the inventor, in a suit which has been slumbering in the courts thirty years, and which, although originally specifying about $300,000 damages, may now involve nearly $50,000,000.

Tremendous importance attaches to the victory of Edison financially, and because it is a direct blow to the great interests of the Western Union Telegraph Company, which for thirty years, the inventor says, has been employing devices owned and patented by him. Judge Hazel has ordered that an accounting be made.

No text of Judge Hazel's decision has yet been received by Mr. Edison.

WHITE HOUSE WEDDING TO BE 'OFFICIAL'

Miss Alice Wants All Diplomats There, and Plans for Ceremony Are Changed.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—Official Washington will be represented at the wedding ceremony and breakfast of Miss Alice Roosevelt and Representative Nicholas Longworth. This has been definitely determined upon, and the few scattering invitations left after these dignitaries have been provided for will be eagerly sought.

It has been decided to accede to Miss Alice's wishes and have an official wedding. This means the display of much gold lace, many decorations and an atmosphere most picturesque. The diplomats in Washington will be asked, and high officials of the Government will be included in the list. The invitations will be held down to about eight hundred. This will comfortably fill the big East Room, where the ceremony is to be performed. Out of the remaining cards the relatives and intimate friends of the two families will be provided for.

WAVES POUND BARGE, CREW REFUSES AID

Lifeboats Are Twice Ordered Away by Men on Stranded Vessel Fannie.

PROVINCETOWN, Jan. 26.—The crew of the stranded whaleback Fannie remain on board their craft, where they believe they are perfectly safe, and have refused the aid of two lifeboats which put off to rescue them. Superintendent Bowley of this district visited the Peaked Hill Beach at noon. He instructed the life-savers on the scene to do their utmost.

A terrible sea was lashing the bar over which the barge had floated, with anchors dragging, earlier in the day. The captain refused assistance.

The Fannie lies between the inner bar and main beach, in water that should preclude pounding at low tide, thanks to the inability of her anchor to hold her at the mooring spot.

The tug Murrell, which had the Fannie in tow when she ran upon the bar, is in Provincetown Harbor, and will to-day make an attempt to haul her into deep water.

BIG AUDIENCE APPLAUDS IRISH PLAYS AT COLONIAL

ELISABETH E. STRANG. KAM PHOTO.

A STAR IN DOUGLAS HYDE'S COMEDY.

[Sor]rows and Joys of Folk Lore Told by 150 Students From Emerson School of Oratory.

One hundred and fifty pupils from the Emerson College of Oratory presented four plays of Irish life at the Colonial Theatre with unusual success. The audience was a very large and a particularly enthusiastic one, the stories of Irish sorrows and joys and of folk-lore appealing greatly to them.

The presentation of these plays marks a new era in dramatics, for it means that the genuine Irish types are to be given, instead of merely the burlesques so often seen on the stage. Everything pertaining to the four plays was appropriate, Irish music was played, the costumes and stage settings were correct and the [illegible] which had been devised by [illegible] Wyman, added greatly to the interest.

"The Saxon Shillin'," by [illegible] Colum, a folk drama in one act; "The Lost Saint," a mystery play by Douglas Hyde; "Riders to the Sea," a folk tragedy by J. M. Synge, and "The Twisting of the Rope," a comedy by Douglas Hyde, were given in their order.

Alice Hastings, Marcia Eacker, Elisabeth Strang, Floyd Fager and Burton R. Miller were seen in the leading roles of "The Twisting of the Rope"; Cornelia Hollinshead, Brayton Byron, Estelle Van Horn and Fay Latham in "Riders to the Sea"; Beulah Marie Dix, Lillian Hennessy, John P. Whitman and Burton R. Miller in "The Saxon Shillin'," with Bernard Lambert, Theodore P. Koch, Hazel Frost, Stella Craig, Helena Hildwell, Josephine McCarthy, Lillian Hennessy and Ida Johnson in "The Lost Saint."

The four plays were given under the direction of Clayton Gilbert and were a success in every way. Rarely is a performance by amateurs given with such excellent ensemble work or such an effective reading of the parts by the principals.

COULD NOT REST NIGHT OR DAY

With Irritating Skin Humor—Whole Body Affected—Scalp Itched All the Time and Hair Began to Fall Out—Wonderful Result From

APPLICATION OF CUTICURA REMEDIES

"I am never without Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment since I tried them last summer. About the latter part of July my whole body began to itch. I did not take much notice of it at first, but it began to get worse all the time, and then I began to get uneasy and tried all kinds of baths and other remedies that were recommended for skin humors; but I became worse all the time. My hair began to fall out and my scalp itched all the time. Especially at night, just as soon as I would get in bed and get warm, my whole body would begin to itch and my finger nails would keep it irritated, and it was not long before I could not rest night or day. A friend asked me to try the Cuticura Remedies, and I did, and the first application helped me wonderfully. For about four weeks I would take a hot bath every night and then apply the Cuticura Ointment to my whole body; and I kept getting better, and by the time I used four boxes of Cuticura I was entirely cured, and my hair stopped falling out, but I continue to use the Cuticura on my scalp. It keeps all dandruff out and scalp is always clean. I always use Cuticura Ointment on my face after shaving, and have found nothing so equal it. I will never be without it." D. E. Blankenship, 319 N. Del. St., Indianapolis, Ind.

Oct. 27, 1905.

RECOMMENDED TO ALL MOTHERS

"I have used Cuticura Ointment for chafing of infants, and as they grew older all skin diseases were given treatment with that and the Cuticura Soap. I never found it necessary to call a doctor, as these Remedies are a sure cure, if used as directed. I am glad to recommend them to all mothers." Sincerely yours, Mrs. F. A. Kennard, St. Paul Park, Minn.

WHOLE WORLD OF SPORTS COVERED FOR THE BOSTON AMERICAN BY ITS CORPS OF EXPERTS

INTEREST WANING IN RACES AT ORMOND

BY DUNCAN CURRY.

Special Correspondent of the Boston American.

ORMOND, Fla., Jan. 26.—As a result of three days' of rain, and a chilly northerly wind, the majority of the spectators and contestants at the automobile races are getting very tired of the whole affair and are longing for the lights and sounds of Broadway.

Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt and his private car slipped away Wednesday, and yesterday Charlie Gates remarked that it was too slow for him, and with Mrs. Gates and a train load of attendants in his wake he started for Palm Beach.

On account of the high wind and rain only two races were pulled off yesterday, and about the only incident worth recording was the arrival of a cable to C. D. Cook, of the American Darracq Company, ordering him to depose the aggressive Mr. Hemery from Darracq cars and transfer him to the custody of S. B. Stevens, the young Rome, N. Y., millionaire.

Prize Handicap First Event.

So far as the racing went, the first event was a prize handicap for American touring cars, in which A. L. Kull and his 50-horsepower Wayne car were placed on scratch, allowing a Stoddard-Dayton car 12 seconds, and a Stanley Steamer 25 seconds in a fifteen-mile race. The Wayne car, which had been reeling off miles at a 59-second clip in practice, made a good start and was doing finely up to a point just beyond Dayton, when one of its battery wires broke. As a result, the Stanley Steamer went on and won the race in the fast time of 13 min. 42 2-5 sec. The Stoddard Dayton car was second, and the Wayne car third.

10-Mile Corinthian Race.

The only other event decided was a ten mile Corinthian race for amateur drivers, in which S. B. Stevens piloted his new 80-horsepwer Darracq car to victory, covering the distance in 6 min. 36 2-5 sec., with James L. Breese, in a 35-horsepower Mercedes, second, and a 90-horsepower Fiat, owned by Charles Barron, practically distanced.

Al Reeves drove a little 18-horsepower Maxwell runabout and covered the race in the remarkably fast time of 12 minutes, 51 1-5 seconds. Deacon Holmes has at last got the Waynes Kites clutch to hold, and the Detroit car was skimming over the beach at a fast clip, reeling off mile after mile in 40 seconds. Summary:

Ten Mile Corinthian Championship, for amateur drivers—First heat, won b S. B. Stevens in a 80 horsepower Darracq, time 6 minutes 36 2-5 seconds; second, J. R. Harding, in a 90 horsepower Mercedes, time 7 minutes 3 2-5 seconds; third, Al Reeves, in a 18 horsepower Maxwell, time 12 minutes 51½ seconds.

Second heat, won b James L. Breese, in a 35 horsepower Mercedes, time 10 minutes 37 seconds; second, Charles W. Barron, in a 90 horsepower Italian car, not timed.

Stevens Won Final.

Final Heat—Won by S. B. Stevens, in an 80-horsepower Darracq, time, 9 min. 28 sec.; second, James L. Breese, in a 35-horsepower Mercedes, time, 9 min. 47 3-5 sec.

Fifteen mile, prize handicap for American stock touring cars—Won by Frank Durbin, in an 18-horsepower Stanley steamer (25 seconds handicap); second, J. E. Bristol, in a 30-horsepower Stoddard-Dayton (12 sec. handicap); third, A. L. Kull, in a 40-horsepower Wayne (scratch). Time, 13 min. 42 2-5 sec.

FLETCHER IN HIS 110 H. P. FIAT READY TO START

LAWRENCE LAD WON NEW YORK BOUT IN ROUND

NEW YORK, Jan. 26.—Willie Lewis of this city met Harry Lewis of Philadelphia for three rounds at the Marlboro A. C., this city. The affair was a draw.

In the other bouts Harry Phillips fought a draw with Tom Markey of Philadelphia. Jimmy Stone outpointed Young Sharkey in a rapid encounter. Young Trio and Jack Duane were bustled out of the ring in the second for faking. Eddie Johnson whipped Tony Moran. Marty Williams of Philadelphia was knocked out in the third by Terry Rogers. Clarence Forbes of Chicago walloped Terry Youngs all over the ring, and Tommy Sullivan of Lawrence, Mass., gave Bill McKinley his quietus in the first round. Sullivan waded in and ripped the right to the jaw and McKinley went down and out.

CHELSEA WON THIS TIME.

The Chelsea high team, which was so badly beaten at basketball by East Boston high Wednesday afternoon, got into the game again at Lincoln Hall, Chelsea, and beat Gloucester high, 18 to 14. In the same hall the battery H team of Chelsea defeated the Lawrence light guards of Medford, 19 to 11.

DOUGLAS CLUB COMPLIES WITH BUILDING LAWS

The management of the Douglas Athletic Club, desirous of complying in every particular with the edicts of the State Police, have added two more exits to their club house, and have placed red lanterns over every exit in the club house. Instead of using sawdust on the floor, two tons of beach sand will be utilized. Every window now covered will be swung on hinges so as to open instantly should occasion warrant. The seats will be arranged differently and it is safe to say that the club arena will next Monday be as safe as any theatre or other place of amusement, subject to approval of the authorities.

This endeavor on the part of the Douglas Club officials to comply with the statutes in every particular is meeting with the merited approbation from the club members, who have already signified their intention to be on hand next Monday.

Kid Sullivan will arrive here Saturday morning from Baltimore, and he is reported to be in grand physical condition. His opponent, Dave Deshler, is working hard and faithfully at Charles River Park, preparing himself for the fray. In the opening preliminary, of six rounds, Mike Grady of Southbridge, and Fred Chisholm of Everett will meet, while in the semifinal, the contestants will be Johnny Ahearn of South Boston and Ralph Kelley of Cambridge.

Secretary Jewett of the Readville Track

OPPOSES POOL-SELLING

"I am willing to go on record as opposed to pool-selling," says Charles Jewett, secretary of the Readville track, "as any method which does not make the bettor pick out one horse in a race to win is absolutely wrong.

"It is well known that in many of the races in the auction pools one horse is made the favorite against the whole field, and, naturally, in most instances, the field will fetch as much or more than does the favorite.

"Then, so great an amount of money has been played on the field that it is impossible for the favorite to win; as the boys say, 'He can't win!'

"On the other hand, if any one horse would have to be backed to beat the choice it would be a far different matter in making it so easy for the cheaters to get their work in so advantage for themselves.

"It has always been too easy for the favorite to be defeated by a field of horses. A bad start for a heat, getting into a pocket on the turn, possibly a break in the third and the race is over.

"When pool-selling is a matter of past history you will find that light harness horse racing will take a boom to the front. It will take with the public, as they prefer picking out one horse in a class to win over the others.

"Is it any wonder that the general public never took to auction pool selling? Most men who go to the races only care to place a small flyer on the horse they happen to like, but when they get to the track it is found that the one they desire to play is either the favorite, selling for $50 up to $500 a crack, or the horse is in the field with a lot of others, which is bringing as much money in a pool as the favorite; consequently, there is no opportunity to place a small wager on the horse picked out in advance.

"Give the small bettors a chance, have good judges, honest racing, commence the races at 2:30 in the afternoon and finish in time so dinner can be had in a seasonable hour at home, and then just watch the gate receipts take rapid jumps upward."

PETERSON NOW AN EX-CHAMP

The signed contract of Robert A. Peterson has been received at American League headquarters. Peterson is a young catcher who resides at Philadelphia, and he caught last season for Harrisburg. The year before he was a member of the Fall River club, but was induced to jump his reserve with that club by Billy Hamilton when the latter took the management of the Harrisburg club.

Peterson is twenty-three years of age, nearly six feet in height and weighs 165 pounds. He is a natural catcher, a .300 hitter and a clever thrower to bases.

TOM SHARKEY TURF MAGNATE

Tom Sharkey has made up his mind that he has been a patron of the turf long enough, and now aspires to be a magnate. According to the bearings he has taken, he will lay his course along the path of the trotters, and he figures his craftiness will carry him safely into a snug harbor, wherein lies the visionary wealth of the race follower, as alluring as the gold of Captain Kidd.

Down in Chester, Pa., Sharkey has sixteen horses in training on the farm of Charles Longbotham, owner of the famous pacer Frank Yoakum, which broke several records and won thhe Hartford cup at Charter Oak Park. Sharkey is in Chester setting his proteges through their paces, and when he has them perfected in footwork he will enter them in contests on all the big tracks.

In average of bases on ball per game Pittenger of Boston has the best record, with 6.10. Ames has the poorest record, 3.10. Ames, however, has the biggest average of strikeouts a game, 5.80. Ames leads in wild pitches, with 30. McIntyre of Brooklyn hit twenty batsmen and leads in this respect. Mathewson pitched the greatest number of shutout victories—9, Young of Boston being second, with 7.

PARKER, 300; VAN DYKE, 136.

Parker was an easy winner over Charles Van Dyke in the New England class A amateur billiard match played at the Hub Billiard Palace, winning decisively by the score of 300 to 136. To-night Engstrom, recent winner of the class B tourney, will play Emerson.

WALCOTT HAS A FAKE WITH DAVE HOLLY

NEW YORK, Jan. 26.—Joe Walcott of Boston and Dave Holly of Philadelphia fought a fake before the Longacre A. C. The Black Demon from the Hub was in poor condition. After two rounds of hugging, wild swinging, and the like, the mill was brought to a close. Walcott insisted that he did his best. A jeering crowd was responsible for the bout's curtailment.

Emergency Kelly of Boston and Johnny Allen of Philadelphia were substituted. They fought hard, the result being a draw. Young Mowatt refused to meet Young Otto, although the latter was on hand.

My Dear Papa—Please bring home Sunday the Katzenjammer Kids. They are in the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN, and I want to see what they have been doing this week.

QUERY ANSWERED.

Hett-Hill, Portsmouth—The Goodman-Yanger bout was stopped in the twelfth round.

BASEBALL STARS WHO EQUALLED MATHEWSON

Fans who have been looking over musty files are now asserting that while Matthewson is a wonder, his feats have been duplicated several times.

Baseball history, they assert, records no work of Bobby Caruthers when he twirled the St. Louis Browns to victory in the American Association pennant race in 1887, and then pitched the Browns to victory in a world's championship series against Anson's Chicago White Stockings.

Charlie Radbourne also won a National League pennant for the Providence club many years ago by his wonderful work in the pitcher's box, and capped the climax at the end of the season by pitching his team to victory over the Metropolitans for the world's championship.

Tim Keefe pitched the old New York Giants to victory in the National League pennant race of 1888, and then beat Comiskey's Browns for the world's championship.

"Lady" Baldwin, a southpaw, was the pitching mainstay of the Detroit sluggers in 1899, when they won the National League flag, and then beat the Browns for the world's championship.

Caruthers, Keefe, Radbourne and Baldwin were all aided more or less by other great pitchers, as Mathewson was helped this season by Joe McGinnity. The latter is one of the greatest pitchers on the diamond, but his glory is eclipsed to a certain extent by the scintillating Mathewson, just as Dave Foutz was by the more brilliant Caruthers.

NEW POWER BOATS WILL BE SPEEDY

Owners of power boats that have been built for racing are not saying very much about their game just now, because so many of the boats that have been built have been failures. Several boats are now in the hands of the builders which, if the expectations of their owners are fulfilled, will be speedy enough to put the sport back again where it was two years ago. E. R. Thomas is having a boat built which he expects will be a world-beater. The boat is being built quietly and nothing is to be announced until it can be shown just what she will do.

William Wallace of Boston is also having an auto boat built which is for speed only, and a well-known designer in New York is at work on two boats that are to have high-powered motors and be for the racing class.

Cruisers are the most popular type of boats for the coming season, though builders of motors are as busy as they can be filling orders for motors of simple type and moderate power for use in cruising boats.

It is expected that there will be a challenge from some foreign motor boat club for one of the trophies held in this country. One is the American Power Boat Association's cup, held by the Chippewa Bay Yacht Club, and the other is the International cup, which is held by the Motor Boat Club.

The Riverton Yacht Club has challenged for the American Power Association cup, and the challenge has been accepted. The race will be held in August. Any club can now enter a boat for this race under the conditions agreed on by the challenging and defending clubs.

TO CONTEST IN POOL CHAMP

The pool championship of New England will start next Monday night at Miah Murray's Billiard Palace, 1,156 Washington street, and $125 will be given in prizes besides the Goodman-Leavitt-Yatter Co. gold medal emblemic of the championship.

Each game will consist of 125 balls and the matches will be played every night till the tournament ends.

The players are Stubbs of Canada, Jimmy Ryan, Scotch champion; English Tom of East Boston, Joe Hood, Napoleon of fancy shots; Tom Duggan, the Irish champion; Fred Ingraham of Brockton, Fish Marsh of Boston, John McHale, the Roxbury Kid, the present champion. Harry Manuel of South Boston will referee.

JACK LONDON WILL TAKE 7-YEAR SEA TRIP

NEW YORK, Jan. 26.—Jack London, the novelist, is having a forty-five foot boat built in San Francisco. With Mrs. London and two servants he intends to make a seven-year tour of the world. A Chinese servant and a Corean will be taken on the trip, and Mr. and Mrs. London will navigate the vessel.

LAKESIDE'S VICTORY

The Lakeside basketball club had an easy time defeating the Dedham A. A. in the Town Hall, Arlington, winning by the score of 38 to 8. In the second half the victors devoted their efforts to perfecting their defense, and as a result the visitors did not score from the floor, so strong was the covering of the home players.

The North End Union wants games with any 115-120 pound teams in the State. Address N. Krock, 20 Parmenter street, Boston.

Notes of the Harness Horses

"Never has the outlook for racing in Maryland and Virginia looked better," writes Secretary Joseph A. Ellis of the Gentlemen's Driving Park, Baltimore. He furthermore states that neither of those States has prohibited the selling of pools and the tracks are consequently making money, but not enough to arouse the envy of persons in or out of the business. That the purses and stakes have been a real incentive to the horse-breeding business is proved by the number of Maryland and Virginia horses racing on the circuit each year and the growth in the sales of high-bred pacers and trotters from the farms which are supporting stables. After the Spring meetings at the tracks in the vicinity of Baltimore many of the trainers will take their best horses to the New England circuit, probably striking Saugus and the Worcester tracks the last of June and the first of July.

The Virginia pacing mare, Minnie Thompson, 2:17¼, made a new world's record last year in the number of races she went, as the books show that she was started thirty-six times, winning fourteen, second in sixteen, third in five and only once back of the money. This seems busy enough.

Dear Papa—When you come home Sunday morning don't forget to bring me the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN. Buster Brown and his dog is in it now, and I don't want to miss it.

Your Loving Son,

STONE TO MEET HOSEY AGAIN

That Jig Stone made a good fight with Willie Hosey at Albany is conclusive by the return match that has been given him to take place in six weeks.

The Albany fans think Hosey a wonder at 133 pounds and are satisfied that Jig gave him a better fight than any of the New York battlers who have faced him.

Stone says that Hosey is one of the hardest boys in the game to mix with, as he is as tough as they make them and if he can get to a man it is all off.

According to the Albany papers Stone did little stalling and the reports sent out to that effect were exaggerated.

M'VEY KNOCKS OUT MARTIN

Special to the Boston American.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Jan. 26.—In the fourth round of what was to have been a twenty-round contest, Sam McVey of Oxford knocked out Denver Ed Martin. While the fight lasted it was one of the fastest contests ever seen in San Diego. From the beginning of the first round to the time Martin was put out with a straight left to the point of the chin the men were fighting fast and furious almost continuously.

Notes of the Diamond.

"So long as I manage a ball club," says Bill Armour, "I'll never buy a set of gray suits for my club. No, never! I did it once, and I've seen others do it, too, and, except in one or two instances, it's been a mistake."

• • •

Thirty-nine years of consecutive service as a baseball player is the remarkable record of James H. O'Rourke, now manager, captain and catcher of the Bridgeport club of the Connecticut League. While O'Rourke has seen more service on the diamond than any player that ever lived, the veteran claims he is good for a dozen more seasons.

"Half a century of active ball playing," said O'Rourke lately; "wouldn't that be great? And I think I can do it."

• • •

The two ball clubs representing New York in the major leagues are believed to carry the highest salaried teams in the profession. The New York Nationals, it is said, received last year more than $60,000 in salary, while the New York Americans' pay roll footed up about $55,000. But the Nationals' salary list included $10,000 drawn by Manager McGraw. No attempt has been made by either club to reduce these figures this year.

• • •

"Developing ball players is largely a matter of available playing space. Pennsylvania sends out the greatest number of professionals, Massachusetts next, with Illinois third," writes Hugh Fullerton. "The 'bottoms' in Cincinnati, the prairies in Chicago and the 'commons' of Massachusetts towns have sent their graduates into every field in the land. Wherever there has been found room for baseball playing good ball players have been developed."

• • •

President Charles W. Murphy of the Chicago National League Baseball Club placed an emphatic stamp of denial on the reports emanating from Cincinnati that Harry Steinfeldt would not be a member of the Cubs next season. According to the story, Steinfeldt, who is now in the Ohio city, intends to enter business in Texas, but President Murphy exhibited several letters he had received from the player since he became a member of the local club through the trade of Jake Weimer, in which "Steiny" declared he was in fine fettle and would be in good shape to play the coming season.

EASY VICTORY FOR NORWOOD

The Norwood Independents defeated the Readville A. C. basketball team in Village Hall, Norwood, last evening, the score being 39 to 9. Captain Nugent of Norwood threw ten baskets from the floor and five from free tries. Captain Allen excelled for the Readville team.

How Much Love Can You Condense Into Eight Lines?

A Daily Prize for Best Valentine Love Verses

HOW much love can you squeeze into eight lines?

St. Valentine's day is less than a month away. It's the one day of all the year dedicated to lovers.

It's the day for the expression of tender sentiments—for interchange of loving greetings between man and maid.

What's the best greeting for the day? The Valentine Editor of the BOSTON AMERICAN wants to know. A cash prize of $2 each day will be awarded for best Valentine verses, not over eight lines long, and the shorter they are the better.

Quotations are not barred. If you quote, be sure and give the author's name. Original verses are preferred.

Get busy, poets. See how much love you can condense into small space. Write on one side only of the paper. Address Valentine Editor, BOSTON AMERICAN, 80-82 Summer street.

Following are some verses taken from this year's crop of valentines. Can you beat them:

Yesterday's Prize Winner

MISS RENA FERRIN,
No. 2 Blanche street, Cambridge

IMPETUOUS

WILL you be my sweetheart, love?
Let me call you turtle dove?
For I love you, you're divine,
Will you be my Valentine?
MRS. LILLIAN SYLVESTER.
No. 88 Lynnfield street, Lynn.

A GREETING

I DARED not speak of my love before,
But waited for this happy day;
And now that it's come
I confess, my loved one,
That your sweetness has made me adore,
Dearest, send me one line
To say you are mine,
Then this heartache I'll bear nevermore.
IDA D. JOHNSON.
Pine street, Greenwood.

A LOYAL SUBJECT

ASK why I dream of thee by night,
And muse of thee by day;
Why earth, when thou art near, is bright,
And dark when thou'rt away.
Ask why I follow where thou art,
And I will tell thee why;
Thou art the sov'reign of my heart,
Thy loyal subject I.
MRS. LIZZIE BIGELOW.
No. 123 Arlington street, Hyde Park.

ALL THINE OWN

EARTH'S vast expanse doth hold for me
One only hope—a dream of thee;
Naught that exists hath power to tear
From my fond heart thine image there;
Forever true to thee alone,
For good and all I'm all thine own.
NORA E. KELLEHER.
No. 16 Moulton street, Charlestown.

TRUE ESTEEM

THE stately lily's splendor,
The tulip's crimson hue
I see, but they're not lovely,
My sweetheart true, as you.

I love you, dear, forever
My dearest wish will be
To call you mine—my very own,
For all eternity.
MARGARET M'LOUGHLIN.
No. 125 Farrington street, Orient Heights.

WHISPERINGS

I WRITE the love I have not dared to say,
And send it in this quaint old-fashioned way.
O that Love's patron, good St. Valentine,
Might whisper you the name I may not sign.
ETTA F. JOHNSON.
No. 174 Armstrong avenue, Providence, R. I.

WOUNDED

SWEETHEART, from thy limpid eye,
Laughing, blue as Summer sky,
With bow in hand a shot to try,
Cupid shy was peeping.
Unerringly he sent a dart
Which found a lodging in my heart,
My precious Valentine thou art,
My fate is in thy keeping.
M. J. O'MALLEY,
No. 236 Woodlawn street, Clinton.

MY VALENTINE

HOW much my life is bound to thine
Can not be told by speech.
As clings the tendrils of the vine
To all within its reach,
As roseate hues blend into one
When twilight sunbeams shine,
So blends my life into thine own
My own sweet Valentine.
F. F. KIMBALL.
No 16 Park street, Cambridge.

WANTS MORE ROOM

O LOVE, in lines that number eight,
How can I e'er expatiate
On all your lovely features?
I must petition Mister Hearst
For much more space till I have versed
The fairest of all creatures.
Would he give room for even nine
Your charms would still fill every line.
J. J. STEARNS.
No. 23 Lauriat avenue, Dorchester.

SAME OLD LOVE

DEAR heart, do you remember,
In the happy long ago,
I claimed you for my Valentine,
The sweetest one I know.
The same old love still lingers,
Dear, unchanged by fleeting time,
In sunshine or in shadow, still,
You'll be my Valentine.
Roxbury. G. F. PERKINS.

FOND AND TRUE

MAID with eyes of deepest blue,
Eyes like stars at night that shine,
Be my sweetheart, fond and true;
Be my own dear Valentine.
ELLEN K. WINTER.
Webster, Mass.

ONE OR TWO

SOME love one and
Some love two,
But I love one
And that is you.
MISS FLOSSIE REED.
No. 220 Main avenue, Gardiner, Me.

WHO'LL BITE?

TO-DAY I'm going fishing,
But not with pole or line;
I want to catch a sweetheart
Who'll be my Valentine.
M. E. DALTON.
No. 200A Hampden street, Roxbury.

A SUGGESTION

O LOVE Divine, my Valentine,
With auburn hair and freckles,
A wedding fine, and thou art mine,
The license costs two shekels.
C. FOYE.
No. 6 First street, Dover, N. H.

LOVE OF ONE

THOUGH the winds of Winter blow, heart of mine,
And all earth be clad in snow, do not pine;
Through life's rain as in its sun
And as long as life shall run,
Thou shalt have the love of one, Valentine.
MISS LIZZIE NICKERSON.
No. 101 Warren avenue, Boston.

MY GAL

ON St. Valentine's Day I think of my wife,
For 'twas then, that I won her—the joy of my life.
Perhaps there are others, more fair to the eye,
But my bonnie Alice, for her I could die.
She still is my sweetheart, true friend and old pal,
You'd prefer I'd live for you, eh! Alice, my gal?
C. B. SPENCER.
No. 29 State street, Boston.

HOW TO TAKE PROPER CARE OF THE HAIR

By the Professor

OWING to the dozens of requests that come to me concerning the hair, I am constrained to answer them collectively. It would seem as if nine out of ten women have some grievance in this direction; either of falling hair, dry scalp or dandruff.

Hair falls when it has completed its growth, just as the fur of animals is shed, but if the scalp is in proper condition another hair will always grow where one came out. If such is not the case, there is something wrong systematically and the physician should be consulted.

There are many ways in which the scalp can be rendered unhealthy, such as keeping the hair done up constantly in the same position, washing the hair too frequently, thus taking out all the natural oil; using harmful bleaches and dyes, and allowing the system to get badly out of order.

Take the hair down often and give it a good sun bath as well as a gentle brushing. Do not shampoo oftener than once a month, even if in good condition, and only once every two or three months if you have dandruff or dry scalp. Use the ordinary "green soap," and be sure to get out all the soap in rinsing, using warm water until the last dash, which should be cold, in order to close the poors and prevent catching cold.

If your scalp is tight on the skull the roots of the hair will not be healthy, but this may be remedied by a gentle massage, pressing firmly on the scalp and moving it on the skull with a rotary motion. Go carefully over the whole scalp thus every night before brushing the hair.

THE HIDDEN MARRIAGE

A Romance of Beacon Street and the Slums of Boston

Synopsis

JUDGE STEPHEN CATHCART was shocked beyond measure when he found that Olive Graham, on trial before him for murder, was his own daughter by the woman he had married as a boy and whom his mother had told him was dead within a few weeks of the marriage. The girl was acquitted.

The judge sent word to Renshaw Mordaunt, his nephew and heir, that the bulk of his property must go to Olive Graham and her mother. Mordaunt, who was wanted by the London police for blackmail, was confronted in a Back Bay saloon by young Graveney, who had been his dupe in England, where Mordaunt was known as Paul Carew. Jimmy Johnson, a stool pigeon for the police, got Mordaunt away and forced him to agree to pay $5,000 to prevent arrest. Johnson tried to betray Mordaunt, who strangled him to death. An hour later, in a vaudeville theatre, a masked performer identified him by the name under which the London police offered $5,000 for him.

Graveney was arrested for the murder of Jimmy Johnson, having evidently followed him and Mordaunt to the old man's home.

Mordaunt's friend, Durham, came to ask him what they should do about Delia Harbron, a girl they had taken from a drunken hawker and educated.

CHAPTER XIII.—Continued

Copyright, 1905, by American-Journal-Examiner.

BUT the colonel declined. He watched his friend drive away; then he pulled from his pocket the letter he had taken from Mordaunt's portmanteau. Smoothing it out with his rather tremulous hand, he read the contents by the light of the street lamp.

"It's rough on him, confoundedly rough? I wonder what Renny will do under the circumstances? It's all very well for the judge to say he knows that his wishes will be as binding to Renshaw's sense of honor as though binding in law; only human nature's weak," soliloquized the colonel; "have found it so myself. There's a certain moral prop about a definite legal document; you mayn't like what's in it, but you know you've got to lump it any way. But kick away that prop, leave all the strain on a man's sense of honor, when that man, too, may be hard up——"

His reflections suddenly broke off into another channel.

"Rory, you're deuced hard up yourself. You can't afford the luxury of those scruples that are the abiding joy of the cheap novelist; however much you may regret it, there the fact is! The question is—what can you make out of this? And will you make most by approaching Renny direct, or by first finding out this Mrs. Graham—I'm glad he refers to her character in such high terms; the other sort are usually as fly as you are yourself. At any rate, it won't be wasted time if I find out what link existed between her and the judge, what claim she had on him."

He put the letter away in his breast pocket as carefully as though it had been a bank note at the least. Lighting one of Mordaunt's cigars, Colonel Rory Thorold swaggered into the nearest saloon to think it out.

CHAPTER XIV.
The Judge's Heir

THE funeral was over.

On the outskirts of the crowd a woman dressed in black, heavily veiled, a solitary figure who had been more to Stephen Cathcart than all these others, whose silent sorrow was deeper than that of all these others. A widow who might not take her place by her husband's grave.

The solitary figure stood with dry, tearless eyes as the coffin was slowly lowered, covered with white waxen flowers; the aching of her heart lay deeper than tears.

Twice so cruelly had she been cheated of the love she craved for. Once by treachery; then, when after the long years it had seemed that their paths would lie together to the end, lit by a tranquil happiness, none the less real though the first keen thrill of youth and love were gone, the Gray Shadow had stepped between. Immortelles for those flowers of hope!

Now she would never bear his name. Had Stephen Cathcart lived he would have given it to her by going through the form of marriage again—he shrank from acknowledging the existing marriage, and she had acquiesced. Now that he was dead, for the sake of the man she loved she would keep that tacit bargain and bear her burden to the end in silen[illegible]

The service was over. She passed slowly out of the cemetery gates. The old clerk, Sangster, who had seen and recognized her, came up.

"Pardon an old man," he said, with his old-fashioned formal courtesy, "may I lend you my arm to the cab, ma'am?" His own step faltered, and his voice was unsteady. "You will understand that this has been a great blow to me," he added, as if apologizing for his own weakness. "The dead whom we are both mourning was so much to me that, now he is gone, I feel as though I had suddenly come to a blank wall, and didn't care whether I climbed over or not."

A Kind Offer

Sangster looked grayer and older.

"You will know that my dear master's last thoughts were of you, ma'am. Mr. Mordaunt received a letter containing his wishes the very night he died."

"My daughter told me," said Olive's mother in a low, dull voice.

She had scarcely given a thought to this other matter in the absorption of her grief.

"I will furnish Mr. Mordaunt with your address, ma'am, and no doubt you will hear from him," added Sangster.

"Thank you," she murmured; but she hardly understood what he said. Her thoughts were with the dead man in the great cemetery behind them.

Sangster escorted her to the cab waiting some little distance down the slope; then turned away dully, a pathetic, forlorn-looking figure who had suddenly found the mainspring of his life broken.

He felt some one touch his arm. He turned. It was Mordaunt.

"Who was that lady, Sangster?" he said.

Mordaunt had seen the old clerk's act of courtesy; he had a suspicion that it was the woman he had seen in his uncle's room, who had called Stephen Cathcart by his Christian name.

"That is the lady referred to in my master's last letter to you, Mr. Renshaw—Mrs. Graham."

Mordaunt turned away; there was a shadow on his face as he got into the carriage.

Sangster had spoken as though he knew something of the contents of that letter. How much did he know?

A Kind Deed

In the chambers at Copley square Sangster was packing up his few effects before bidding farewell to the place, with its memories of years.

The suite of rooms had already been let, and Mordaunt had sold most of the furniture to the incoming tenant. John Cartmell had taken his old friend's chambers.

With his own hands Sangster had packed the more intimate effects of his late master with a loving care. One packet that he had come across he had destroyed without consulting Mordaunt, a package on the outer cover of which was inscribed: "To be destroyed after my death, unopened." Stephen Cathcart had sealed up again that packet of letters which he had given to Elspeth to open on the night before his death.

Perhaps a certain mistrust of the new heir had prompted Sangster in so acting.

The will had been read after the funeral; Sangster had sat in the room and listened to the solicitor reading it, knowing how little that brief document represented in reality the dead man's last wishes; a handsome legacy to himself, a few minor bequests to old servants, sums left to various charities, and the residue to his dear nephew by marriage, Renshaw Mordaunt.

TO BE CONTINUED.

JACK HARKAWAY'S SON

CHAPTER XII.
A Race of Giants

Copyright, 1906, by American-Journal-Examiner.

AS Rivers stood staring at the great snake, Jack Harkaway was a prey to a fear of more terrible creatures than any of the wild beasts of the jungle.

For a long time he was carried through the blinding storm.

He could hardly see his captors, nor could he understand a word of that jargon, which they kept up continually.

He knew that he was being carried down into a deep valley, and presently he heard the roar of a great cataract within a little distance of him.

Here he was deposited roughly on the ground, while some of his captors sat on him to make sure that he should not escape.

The storm was now dying away.

Gradually the wind abated in violence, and soon the clouds of dust that had blinded Jack's eyes subsided, so that he could see about him.

He was at the edge of a precipice, over which a mighty torrent, full as large as Niagara, was rushing and plunging with a sound like thunder.

All about were low evergreen trees, and back of these were the stately pinnacles of mighty forest monarchs, backed against the sky.

Jack's more immediate concern, however, was for his captors, and he studied them as well as he could from his painful position on the ground.

They were all very large men, some of them six feet seven and eight inches, and their hair, which was long and curly, was combed straight up into tall pompadours, giving them the effect of being even taller.

Their faces were cut and slashed with knives, leaving long, ghastly scars, and their bodies were tattooed from head to foot.

Jack had not long to wait where he was. As soon as the storm died away he was taken up and tied to a nearby tree, while the blacks held a council over him.

Preparing for Human Sacrifice

He saw with consternation that while the older and stronger men were talking the others were busy building a fire, and he guessed from the preparations that were made that it was the purpose to eat him without delay.

Presently the conference was ended, and then began a series of antics which Jack guessed to be the fulfilment of some religious rite.

Then men formed in a circle about him, kneeled three times and then, dancing like Indians, began a curious chant.

When this was done he was untied and led to the fire.

But a still more startling surprise now awaited him.

For, instead of falling upon him as he expected them to, they led him to a stone seat which had been built by the fire builders, and, bowing low, placed him in it.

Then three of them disappeared in the brush, and presently returned with another man.

Jack had but one glimpse of this man, but that was enough.

He was the white man who several times had sought to warn the newcomer to depart, and it was plain from the actions of his captors that it was he [illegible] not Jack, who was to be killed and [illegible] that Jack was expected to sha[illegible]

Hearst's Boston American Pattern

Ladies' Tucked Waist

No. 1,225—A pompadour yoke invests this handsome design with an indefinable distinction, and for its construction checked silk in lavender and white was employed with a fancy decoration of fancy stitches and hand-made motifs of silk and rope twist. The innumerable essentials now demanded in all exclusive models are prominently displayed, particular attention being called to the unique appearance of the sleeve.

The waist is tucked at the centre of the back and on the shoulders over the bust, and the fronts are uniquely shaped to frame the yoke, and shirrings contribute to the general result. The sleeves are an original conception and are characterized by deep cuffs as illustrated, the upper portion being made to droop in the accepted way. The lining may be omitted if preferred.

Any number of beautiful silken fabrics may be subjected to this purpose, chief among which may be mentioned the indescribably lovely Dresden and Du Barry silks, with their trailing pink roses and posies of all prismatic tints. Crepe de chine, radium silk, peau de crepe, Milanese Louisine, taffeta, albatross, veiling, wool, batiste and other materials are adaptable.

This pattern is cut in six sizes, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust measure. For 36-inch size 4½ yards of material 32 inches wide are required.

'FIGHTING JOE' WHEELER DIES AT AGE OF 70

Soldier's Burial for Veteran of Civil War, Cuba and the Philippines.

WAS ILL ONLY FEW DAYS

NEW YORK, Jan. 26.—"Fighting Joe" Wheeler, Confederate cavalry leader, nine times elected to the Congress of the United States, and major-general in the Spanish-American war, is dead at the home of his sister, Mrs. Sterling Smith, in Brooklyn, of pneumonia, at the age of seventy years. He was ill only a week. He will be given the burial of a soldier in the Arlington National Cemetery, near Washington. General Wheeler's four daughters and his son, Major Joseph Wheeler, Jr., of the United States Army, were present at his bedside.

From the time, forty years ago, when Wheeler was a dashing young lieutenant of dragoons in the United States Army, until at the age of sixty-two, when as a leader of American troops in Cuba the general swung his hat and urged his men on toward the "Yanks," as he called the Spaniards in his excitement, General Wheeler was a typical American fighting man. He was always "Little Joe," who loved the din of battle.

A Graduate of West Point.

General Wheeler was born in Augusta, Georgia. He graduated from West Point in 1859, but resigned his commission in the United States Army in 1861 to join the Confederate forces.

He accepted the commission of first lieutenant in the artillery. A few months later he was made a colonel of an Alabama regiment. Later he was awarded a general's commission.

From first to last no fewer than thirty-two of his staff officers were killed while riding beside him in battle and sixteen horses were shot from under him.

Dashing Cavalry Leader.

Some of General Wheeler's most daring and successful exploits during the Civil War were his cavalry raids. He was a constant menance to the Union lines and means of communication and transportation.

In 1898 the general was given a commission in the war with Spain. He was in action before Santiago. A year later when trouble was brewing in the Philippines he was given command of a division in the Islands.

WHEELER'S DEATH CAUSES SUICIDE OF SOUTHERN WOMAN

CHICAGO, Jan. 26.—Marguerite Bailey, a Southern woman of wealth, fifty-five years old, committed suicide by swallowing poison immediately after hearing of the death of General Joseph Wheeler.

Occupying the same apartments at the hotel with her was Mrs. Catherine Swartout, also a Southern woman.

They heard newsboys calling extras announcing the death of General Wheeler. Mrs. Swartout hastened out to purchase a paper and while she was gone, Mrs. Bailey laid down upon the bed and swallowed poison. She was speechless and beyond aid when Mrs. Swartout returned.

Mrs. Bailey had a deep admiration for General Wheeler, as a soldier and man. She gloried in all his military achievements and never missed an opportunity to sing his praises. Since his illness she remained in her room, saying she did not care to live if he died. She said they had met many years ago in the South, and while not admitting an attachment of the heart, said he was a grand man and that his death would be an irreparable loss.

SAY GALLINGER ABUSES FRANK

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—Postmaster General Cortelyou and members of Congress have received copies of a remonstrance filed with Attorney General Moody by the National German-American Alliance against the alleged improper use of the mails under the frank of Senator Gallinger of New Hampshire, in furthering the interests of the International Reform Bureau, of this city, which is in charge of Wilbur F. Crafts.

The allegation is made that a pamphlet bears an advertisement of the International Reform Bureau, which is said to be from a Senate document on "Moral Legislation," and has not the franking privilege.

MAYOR ADVISES ALL TO MARRY

Prince Edward Islanders resident in Boston henceforth have Mayor John F. Fitzgerald's encouragement for marrying and giving in marriage among themselves. Nearly 700 people gathered in Paul Revere Hall, under the auspices of the Prince Edward Island Club for their tenth reunion and ball, and the Mayor declared decidedly against race suicide.

"When I first became Mayor of Boston," said Mr. Fitzgerald, "I was much disturbed over the statistics of marriages. You can help. Marry among yourselves, and help to make Boston bigger and better."

PROBE ACTIVITY OF POSTMASTERS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—President Roosevelt entertained at luncheon Mayor Fagan and George L. Record, corporation counsel of Jersey City. Charges against some of the postmasters of New Jersey of pernicious political activity have been made by Mayor Fagan. They are being investigated by the Postmaster General. The charges were dismissed at the luncheon.

WHAT IT MEANS TO YOU.

Few People Realize the Importance of Good Digestion Until It Is Lost.

Many people suffer from dyspepsia and do not know it. They feel mean, out of sorts, peevish, do not sleep well, do not have a good keen appetite, do not have the inclination and energy for physical or mental work they once had, but at the same time do not feel any particular pain or distress in the stomach. Yet all this is the result of poor digestion, an insidious form of Dyspepsia, which can only be cured by a remedy specially intended to cure it and make the digestive organs act naturally, and properly digest the food eaten. Bitters, after dinner pills and nerve tonics will never help the trouble; they don't reach it. The new medical discovery does. It is called Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets and is a specific for dyspepsia and indigestion. It cures because it thoroughly digests all wholesome food taken into the stomach, whether the stomach is in good working order or not.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, by digesting the food, instead of making the worn out stomach do all the work, gives it a much needed rest and a cure of dyspepsia is the natural result.

When you are nervous, run down and sleepless, don't make the common mistake of supposing your nervous system needs treatment and fill your stomach with powerful nerve tonics which make you feel good for a little while only to fall back farther than ever.

Your nerves are all right but they are starved, they want food.

Nourish them with wholesome everyday food and plenty of it, well digested, and you can laugh at nerve tonics and medicine.

But the nerves will not be nourished from a weak, abused stomach, but when the digestion has been made perfect by the use of this remedy all nervous symptoms disappear.

Who ever heard of a man or woman blessed with a vigorous digestion and good appetite being troubled with their nerves?

Good digestion means a strong nervous system, abundance of energy, and capacity to enjoy the good things of life.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will certainly set your stomach and digestive organs right; they can't help but do it because they nourish the body by digesting the food eaten and rest the stomach.

You get nourishment and rest at one and the same time, and that is all the worn out dyspeptic needs to build him up and give new life to every organ and an added zest to every pleasure.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are a godsend to the army of men and women with weak stomachs and nerves and justly merits the claim of being one of the most worthy medical discoveries of the time.

INDICT RICH BOSTON MAN FOR BIGAMY

Leonard S. Sanborn Charged by New Orleans Grand Jury With Marrying Twice.

BOTH WERE SENSATIONAL

Leonard S. Sanborn, a Harvard man and member of a wealthy Winchester family, has been indicted by the New Orleans Grand Jury for bigamy. It is charged that within three months after he eloped with Miss Agnes Gordon of Lowell and married her in Brooklyn in December, 1903, he went to New Orleans and married Miss Gerda Ohlsen of Stockholm, Sweden, during the Mardi Gras festival in February, 1904.

Sanborn is supposed to be somewhere in or around Boston, as the New Orleans authorities have been unable to locate him in their city.

No. 1 in Hospital; Wooed No. 2.

After his marriage to Miss Gordon in Lowell, he went on an extended honeymoon, and nothing was heard of him and his bride until an accident occured to them in Austin, Tex., where a horse ran away, throwing Mrs. Sanborn No. 1 from the carriage and badly injuring her.

While she was in the hospital it is alleged her husband made his way to New Orleans and became enamored with Miss Ohlsen. He made a rapid wooer, and agreed to marry the girl next day. They went to the office of Judge Downing in New Orleans, and the judge married them. Hardly had the ceremony been completed and Sanborn and his new wife out of the office, when Mrs. Sanborn, that was Miss Gordon, came to the judge and tearfully begged him to annul the second marriage. She promised to return the next day with a certificate.

Bride Locks Up Wife.

She didn't return. But Miss Ohlson that was did. Miss Ohlsen that was demanded a marriage certificate. The judge refused to give it until after several days had passed, and then, upon the failure of the first wife to show up, he gave her a certificate.

The very next day Mrs. Sanborn No. 1 rushed into his office with her marriage certificate, and said that the reason she did not come sooner was that Miss Ohlsen that was had locked her up in a room. The New Orleans police would like to get track of Sanborn. He had several escapades at Harvard, but none that landed him within the clutches of the law.

BOSTON TUG SEIZED AND FINED IN CANADA

EASPORT, Me., Jan. 26.—The Boston tug Underwriter was seized by Canadian authorities for failure to report at the custom house at Campobello, N. B., where she left her tow of barges while coming here, two miles across the boundary line, to obtain telegraphic orders. A fine of $400 was imposed, a bond given for security, and the tug proceeded without her barges for Boston light for further orders.

LABOR NEWS

ALLIED PRINTING TRADES UNION LABEL COUNCIL BOSTON, MASS 96

The ministers of Boston and vicinity are showing a deep interest in the book and job printers' campaign for an eight-hour day. The Rev. Charles S. MacFarland, pastor of the Maplewood Congregational Church, Malden, at the people's service of his church to-night, will speak on the coming printers' strike in Boston.

The Congregational ministers have invited Secretary Henry Sterling of the Boston Typographical Union and President John F. Tobin of the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union to address them at next Monday morning's meeting at Pilgrim Hall, Congregational House, on "Ethics of Trades Unionism."

The Cambridge Central Labor Union has planned a big eight-hour-day mass meeting for next Monday evening at Cyprus Hall, No. 40 Prospect street, that city. George E. McNeil, "father of the eight-hour day," will preside. The speakers will be: James Duncan, first vice-president of the American Federation of Labor; Secretary-Treasurer D. D. Driscoll, of the State Branch, A. F. of L.; Professor Frank Parsons, president of the Municipal Ownership League; Charles T. Scott, New England Organizer of the International Typographical Union; State Senators William Taylor and Frederick J. MacLeod, Frank K. Foster, Joseph F. O'Connell of Boston, Andrew J. Rady of Cambridge, John T. Shea of Cambridge, Harry J. Skeffington of Revere, Alderman Fred J. Kneeland of this city, Secretary Henry Sterling of Boston Typographical Union, Special Organizer Joseph B. Gill, President M. D. Collins of the Cambridge Central Labor Union, and others.

MACHINISTS INITIATE.

Machinists' Lodge No. 264 admitted eleven candidates at last night's smoke-talk and initiation at Mechanics' Hall. A thirty days' dispensation having been granted for the reinstatement of dropped members by the Grand Lodge, Lodge No. 264 will initiate at every weekly meeting for a month. President Madden has appointed the following organizing committee: John J. Connolly, E. H. Fitzgerald, Charles R. Sterling, Robert Tate, Tyson Powers and John Rosen.

DONAGHUE IS PRESIDENT.

Team Drivers' Joint District Council has elected these officers: President, Peter J. Donaghue of Lumber Teamsters' Union No. 112; vice-president, Daniel J. Tobin of Team Drivers' Union No. 25; recording secretary, Henry White of Newspaper Wagon Drivers' Union; financial secretary-treasurer, Michael J. Sheehan of Coal Teamsters; warden, P. D. Daly of Carriage and Cab Drivers; corresponding secretary, D. F. Donovan of Sand and Tipcart Drivers; trustees, J. J. Downey and J. A. Turnbull. The council has indorsed the movement to have the sidewalk removed from the Atlantic avenue side of the South station, so that teams can drive direct to the doors and thus save the drivers much work in handling baggage.

LABOR NOTES.

Cigarmakers' Union No. 97, at to-night's meeting, will elect tellers for the international election to be held February 10.

President E. C. Pooley and O. H. Bean of Boston Patternmakers' Association addressed a meeting at Providence last night.

Electrical Workers' Union No. 103 has named S. E. Sanborn, John W. Barton and Martin T. Joyce a committee to appear before the legislative committees on all bills relating to electrical work now before the Legislature.

Thomas P. Butler, George W. Patterson, John VanBuren, Edward Hollman, Milton Young, M. McCormack, Louis Coffin, John Carmody and George A. Rodgers have been elected by Carriage and Wagon Workers' Union as delegates to the Central Labor Union.

The Lawrence Central Labor Union has invited Secretary-Treasurer D. D. Driscoll of the State Branch, A. F. of L., to address a mass meeting under its auspices on Sunday.

100 MIDDIES MAY HAVE TO GO

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—Secretary Bonaparte has signed the order dismissing from the naval service Stephen Decatur, Jr., a midshipman at the Naval Academy, for aiding in hazing without reporting the same. A descendant of the Stephen Decatur who burned the Philadelphia in the war with Tripoli, he is the fifth of his name and the sixth member of his family who has served in the navy.

One thing now worrying the Navy Department and Congress is that it may be necessary to dismiss twenty-five, fifty or even 100 midshipmen, who may be found guilty of hazing in various degrees, as the prescribed penalty is dismissal.

Secretary Bonaparte's anti-hazing bill provides for graduated punishments, according to the degree of the offences.

Dear Papa—When you come home Sunday morning don't forget to bring me the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN. Buster Brown and his dog is in it now, and I don't want to miss it.

Your Loving Son, WILLIE.

PASSES BILL FOR STATEHOOD

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—By a vote of 194 to 150 the Statehood bill passed the House. Thus was the second of the three big administration measures disposed of. The insurgents, thirty-three in number, made a bold stand against the measure, but were outclassed in the fight. Representative Southall of Virginia was the only Democrat to favor the bill.

Representative Babcock, leader of the insurgents, and some of his lieutenants predict that the joint bill creating two States will be defeated in the Senate. They claim two champions pledged to talk the measure to death. The insurgents were sore at their defeat, but claim they have not lost prestige. Stalwarts humorously presented their insurgent friends with packages of Red Cross "first aid to the injured."

VERMONT AFTER MILEAGE GRAFT

RUTLAND, Vt., Jan. 26.—John N. Woodfin, president of the State Board of Prison Directors, has placed in the hands of Attorney-General Clark C. Fitts of Brattleboro for investigation a case which they believe will strengthen the charge made by Superintendent D. L. Morgan at the recent investigation at the House of Correction that Vermont officers are making big money and overcrowding the institution with prisoners through graft and mileage.

BABSON'S STATEMENT ON MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP

It Contains No Legitimate Argument Against Municipal Ownership of Boston's Lighting Plants

The statements of City Attorney Babson in relation to municipal lighting are being used as arguments against municipal ownership.

But this is not a legitimate use of the facts recited by the attorney.

There is nothing in the document which need cause the least hesitation about proceeding with the municipal lighting order—nothing that would cause any Councilman or Alderman to hesitate if he were proceeding in his own private business instead of in the business of the city.

If any member of the city government, including the City Attorney, had the right to take over the gas works or the electric light works, or both, at their real value as ascertained by the Supreme Judicial Court, he would easily find a way to overcome all obstacles in the case.

Suppose the 2½ per cent. limit for lighting bonds does draw the line on such bonds at $31,000,000. What of it?

That is more than enough to buy the gas works, or the electric light works.

And if we want to buy both at the same time we can use the $31,000,000 in part payment and get the rest of the money on a mortgage of the plant itself.

The whole of the funds can be raised without a dollar of debt on the part of the city, as was explained in our editorial last Monday on the city debt limit and the method of escape adopted in Springfield, Ill.

* * *

It must not be forgotten that it is not at all likely the Supreme Court will value the lighting plants at any such figures as those the companies put out. Their claims cover all manner of dead capital and extravagant estimates made on purpose to stand cutting down, on the principle of an East Side clothing house in New York.

As to the outlying portions of the plants, the rule as to action by Council within sixty days after filing of the schedule, is a mere technicality which will not be insisted on by the companies nor maintained by the Legislature in the face of any reasonable pressure to the contrary.

Any private company or individual who had as much control over the lighting companies as the Mayor and Aldermen have through their power over street locations and regulations, would easily bring the lighting monopolies to reasonable terms.

And any company or individual who had as much influence with the Legislature as the City of Boston has, could easily obtain any reasonable legislation that might be of advantage in safeguarding its rights and facilitating the exercise of its power of purchase.

* * *

Some have understood from the Babson statement that, if the Council passed this second vote, the city would be committed irrevocably to the purchase of the gas and electric works.

That is a mistake.

The only effect of this second action by the city government will be to send the question to the people for decision at the polls.

Before the vote at the polls the works will be examined by impartial experts such as would, be appointed for a Supreme Court appraisal, so that the people will know the real value that must be paid, and will vote with an accurate knowledge of all the facts and the terms to be met.

It is only those who do not want the people to have a chance to vote on the question of municipal ownership who are protesting against the second vote by Council.

Such men naturally erect the difficulties in the case into insuperable barriers.

Men who do not want to do a thing seize on the most ordinary obstacles as conclusive reasons for abandoning a project to which their private interests are opposed.

But men who really want to accomplish a great purpose regard obstacles simply as occasions for care, thought and energy, that they may be easily, swiftly and inexpensively overcome.

* * *

Let us emphasize once more the fact that if any company or individual had the opportunity which Boston now has to take over the gas and electric light works at actual market value as finally determined by the Supreme Court on the testimony of impartial experts, and thereby secure for itself or himself all the future profits and benefits of these great and increasingly valuable properties, all the obstacles would be as chaff in the wind and the purpose would be accomplished without any quibbling or unnecessary delay.

It is for our Council and our people to exercise the same energy and foresight in the business of the city that they would exercise if the option and the power of purchase were in their own hands for their own private benefit.

THE GAS AND THE ELECTRIC TRUSTS

Their Allies and Beneficiaries Protest Against Municipal Ownership Through the Boston Consolidated-Electric-Telephone-Elevated-Merchants' Association, to Which They All Belong.

The "Boston Merchants' Association" has issued a protest against municipal ownership of a city lighting plant.

With all due respect to the "Merchants' Association" it is only fair to the public to state that the great mass of members of the association are financially interested in the continuance of the present system.

We have before us a list of the members of the "Merchants' Association." Some of the names are very interesting in this connection:

BOSTON CONSOLIDATED GAS COMPANY.

EDISON ELECTRIC ILLUMINATING COMPANY OF BOSTON.

Perhaps we could hardly expect such "merchants" as these to favor a municipal lighting plant.

Neither should we think the following "merchants," who are members of the "Boston Merchants' Association," would stay awake nights trying to find out how to persuade councilmen to vote for municipal ownership:

Boston Elevated Railway Company.
New England Telephone & Telegraph Company.
American Telephone & Telegraph Company.

* * *

That's the sort of "merchants" who form a large part of the marrow of our so-called Merchants' Association. Here are some more merchants in this interesting list:

Boston & Maine Railroad Company.
New York Central & Hudson River Railroad.
New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad.
Adams Express Company.
American Express Company.
Boston Wharf Company.
Boylston National Bank.
Commonwealth Trust Company.
Clyde New England & Southern Lines.
Metropolitan Coal Company.
National Life Insurance Company.
Fourth National Bank.
First National Bank.
Eliot National Bank.
Freeman's National Bank.
Mercantile Trust Company.
Metropolitan Steamship Company.
Allan Line Steamship Company.
National Shawmut Bank.
National Union Bank.
Second National Bank.
State National Bank.
Kidder, Peabody & Co.
White Star Line.
Pope Manufacturing Company, etc., etc.

Then there is a choice lot of trusts—the Leather Trust, the Sugar Trust, the Rubber Trust, etc., etc.

There are some merchants mixed in—a considerable number of the largest houses in the city belong to the association. But THE RANK AND FILE OF THE MERCHANTS OF BOSTON ARE NOT THERE, AND THE WHOLE LIST REPRESENTS BUT A VERY SMALL FRACTION OF OUR MERCHANTS.

* * *

No one would expect anything but opposition to municipal ownership from the Consolidated Gas, or the Edison Electric, or the Boston Elevated, or the New England Telephone, the Boston & Maine, New Haven & Hartford, or any organization in which they or their allies had a strong influence.

And even in the case of the real merchants in the association, may it not be possible that their judgment in this matter is influenced, unconsciously in many cases probably, by their associations with the heads of the great public service corporations which constitute such prominent factors in the organization, and by the fact that they themselves—these big merchants—belong to the class that is favored by private ownership.

It has been shown in these columns that large consumers of electric light in Boston get millions of kilowatts at rates only one-fourth or one-fifth of those paid by small consumers.

Under municipal ownership big merchants and manufacturers, etc., usually have to pay the same rates as small merchants and manufacturers. And there are only a few men who will favor a movement that promises to take away some of their special privileges and profits. The arguments against a movement always seem very strong to those to whom the movement means personal loss.

It is clear that the protest of the so-called "Merchants' Association" against municipal ownership is entitled to little if any more weight than if it had been explicitly signed:

Boston Consolidated Gas,
Boston Elevated,
Bell Telephone,
Edison Electric Company,
And their beneficiaries.

Let us have full investigation and full discussion.

Let the Council and the People have all the facts.

But do not let us be hoodooed by any protest which comes from an organization in which the private monopolies are powerful factors, or by any protest of those who are stockholders in the publbic service corporations or beneficiaries of the present system, or otherwise interested in its continuance, no matter how excellent their standing in the community may be.

Mr. Schwab's New $6,000,000 House

By Rev. Thomas B. Gregory

MR. SCHWAB has a new house.

May it not be possible that the correct thing to say is that the new house has Mr. Schwab?

We are not all made alike, but as for myself, I should feel that I was dreadfully handicapped if I had to be tied up with a $6,000,000 habitation!

A man's house, like every other necessity of his physical nature, should sit as easily upon him as possible—but think of a man having to bear up the weight of a $6,000,000 house!

What is a house, anyway?

Primarily, a house is a Shelter, and then a Home—a place where, protected from the too-hot sun of Summer and the chilling blasts of Winter, father, mother and children may dwell together in the spirit of a reciprocal love and helpfulness.

But the man who is unfortunate enough to have to live in a $6,000,000 house has not a Home, but only a great big boarding house for servants—a hired girls' Rest, a hired man's Haven!

In a place so vast and splendid, with so many "appointments" and such a labyrinth of "functions," how can the poor, plain, simple domesticities manage to keep themselves alive?

The great world poet makes one of his queenly characters exclaim:

"'Tis better to be lowly born,
And range with humble livers in content
Than to be perked up in a glittering grief
And wear a golden sorrow."

Mr. Schwab has evidently not gone to the trouble of reading, studying and "inwardly digesting" Thoreau's immortal little book, "Walden."

I once had an idea that I would like a fine house myself, a palatial sort of place, filled full with everything rich and rare—wherein I might live like a lord and dispense my largesses like a prince!

I read "Walden," and my idea was knocked higher than a kite, with the result that I am a great deal freer and happier than I would have been had I gone on and got myself tangled up with my fine house.

Life is too short, and the sunshine is too winsome, and the opportunities for usefulness and joy are too numerous to be bothering with such a bit of impedimenta as a great "Establishment."

I prefer to "establish" myself in any little old corner that comes along, where I can do my work, and, after that, read some good book, or chat with some true friend—and the smaller and plainer the corner, in reason, the better.

This is a free country, and if a man has the money and wants to build himself a $6,000,000 house I suppose it is nobody's business but his own; but I was just thinking that of all the men I have ever known, I can think of but two or three who would not look mighty small and cheap in a $6,000,000 house—the grandeur of the establishment would form such a painful contrast to that of the occupant's soul!

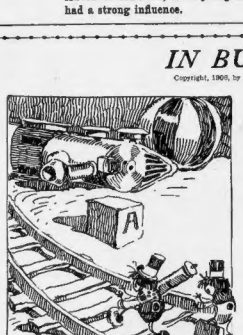

A man ought always to be larger, and grander, and more attractive than the house he lives in—so rich in all the elements of manhood, so strong and glorious in truth and goodness as to make it impossible for his habitation to shame him.

Mr. Schwab may be all this—I hope he is—and now that he is installed in his palace, may he be given the strength that will enable him to bear up under his great burden with all becoming resignation and grace.

To live in the hearts we leave behind is not to die.

IN BUGVILLE

BUG ACTOR—It's a shame the people around here don't appreciate dramatic art. Now we've got to walk all the way back to Bugville.

FLY—I wonder who's buried here. I don't see any inscription on the monument.

BEE—We're up against it, fellers. The Trust has corralled all the flowers.

BOOK-WORM—When you get through that book lend it to me, will you, old man?

Midas Up-to-Date

(Colonel William D. Mann, editor of Town Topics, admitted on the witness stand that he had borrowed $100,000 from well-known men and that he had sold ten-dollar shares of Town Topics stock for $1,000 a share.)

By Charles P. Clark

MISTER PERKINS, brash and breezy, may have found insurance easy;
Mister Morgan may have piles of bonds and stocks;
But the very latest caper is to run a little paper
If you want to garner in the ready rocks.

Jimmy Hyde may hold his dances; all I ask is "Fads and Fancies,"
And a borrowing acquaintanceship with Keene.
Ryan, Vanderbilt and Gates, just to keep me out of straits
If a plea to please pay up should intervene.

Editors who storm and thunder while collectors wait and wonder
Shouldn't think the universe has gone to smash;
Heed this helpful innuendo; go and do as other men do;
And remember that the Colonel got the cash.

Who, indeed, would dare to chide us, with example here to guide us.
Save some long-forgotten fogy growing old,
Or a still small voice inside us that might stop us playing Midas
When our "touch" could turn most everything to gold.

Do You Earn the Salary You Get?

By Rev. Albert E. George

DO you earn your salary? Are you perfectly satisfied that what you render in service is an equivalent for the amount of salary you receive?

Suppose you are getting $1,500 a year, are you confident that you are worth it? Such a question is ticklish and touches us where we are more or less sensitive.

Sometimes, the smaller the amount of salary, the more likelihood there is that we are really earning it.

A small salary carries with it no inspiration, and is more within the reach of one's earning power. The generality of us have to work to live, and the generality of people get small salaries.

You take a clerk plodding along daily in a routine of duty, that is his second nature, and knowing just exactly what he has to do every year, and he is apt to compare notes.

He sees work that he turns out faithfully and conscientiously, and then he peeps at his small salary.

He thinks he is worth more than it stands for. He knows very well that if he should throw up his situation there would be no difficulty in filling it.

He is conscious that he is worth all he is getting and something more.

But when we are rendering a dollar's worth of service for every dollar of money we should be satisfied with ourselves.

Do not make yourself uneasy about your salary? If you are getting what you are worth, and you are sure that you are worth what you are getting, why you have reached a state of contentment.

There may come a time when you are worth more than you are getting. Make it evident. Make your work stand out conspicuous that it will convey this impression.

It will be a very dull employer that will not see this after a time. If he persists in not earning it, why then you are justified in calling his attention to it.

Do not presume to do this until you are confident that the coast is clear for this kind of sailing.

Large salaries tend to make some more important than they really are. To be all salary, and to be commonplace in your work requires a dead pull by it.

One hundred thousand dollars a year may mean only $50,000 worth of service, and may not mean that. At any rate this interpretation was recently placed upon that kind of salary. You cannot judge a man's worth by his salary. You may determine his pull by it.

But giving in service what you get in salary makes anyone independent of any obligation to his employer.

Good wages if they stand for good, substantial work are just.

Small wages for good work may mean imposition.
